THE HEART WILL HAVE ITS WAY.

The heart will have its way.

See yonder child, by Nature led,

No rule of life to guide;

See Prudence with her thoughtful head
And manhood in its pride—
All run in pleasure's heedlegs race,
And after folly strey.

At every age, in every place,

The heart will have its way—
It sown delicious way—
In spite of all the head can do
In spite of sad evapreince, too,

The heart will have its way.

Alsal for him whose heart te dead.

The heart will have its way.

Alas! for him whose heart is dead.
To every generous beat;
No love-light on his life is shed,
No sympathy he'll meet.
This better far to give the price.
That fools to folly pay—
Bo mee in overything but vice,
And give the heart its way—
Its own dolightful way—

THE TRAMPS.

BY EDWIN GOADBY

O. PALMER,

GRAYLING, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1886.

"Give us a bit o' poetry, mate."

Can we ever tell to what uses we may put the verses and passages we learn at school and in early youth? They may perhaps save our sanity and self-respect.

Here is annoher story. A tanned face, unkempt hair, intelligent eyes, clothes worn into a fluffy softness of texture, boots with loose soles, obviously never made for the wearer, hands dirty and large, announced to me, as I looked at them, a broken-down specimen of the work seeker. His companion, a suspicious, furtive-looking tramp, a sailor, and not unlikely the inspirer of the journey. Condensing what it took me a couple of hours to learn, this was his story: Poor Reacht Willi Haye III w.
And keep an honest grip;
Yot nien will acomotimes play the fool,
And give their wits the slip.
Let Judgment caution or condemn,
And Concience still rey "Nay."
Sweet Fancy sings her song to them,
And gives the honet its way—
Its own delightful way—
In spile of all that Thought can do;
In spile of all that Thought can drip,
And all Experience ever know—
The heart will have its way.
So Nature wills it—old and young.

The heart will have its way.

So Nature wills it-old and young.
The wisest and the bost,
Have catight the strain from Passion's tongue,
And felt her sweet unrest.
Tis well to be of human kind—
To own dear Nature's away;
For, midst the dim, cold realms of mind,
The heart would isse its way—
The heart would isse its way—
In spice of reason, we re're but fools—
In spite of reason, we re're but fools—
The heart will have its way.
The heart will have its way.

inspirer of the joinney. Concessing what it took ine a couple of hours to learn, this was his story:

"Respectably connected, had never learnt a trade; had been a shop porter, married a pretty seamstress, lived happily together for years on our joint earnings. No childen—didn't want them—hadn't a care. Wife's work fell off, food lessened; she became fil; bit by bit furniture sold, her heart broken at parting with what she had painfully won by her labor. When we had to soll the sewing machine, I could see 'twas all over—she chammed and died. After her funeral, started off, Friends had left the place. I couldn't stand the work. No more happiness for me, sir. Whither bound? To S—. Worked there once—might get a job. T— the only man I knew. Hard, sir—very hard!"

During this fragmentary conversation, 1 saw the man greedily grasp at a fragment of newspaper, lying upon the ground which had evidently been wrapped round omething.

"Might have an advertisment on it, you

The sight of a sewing machine always suggests his touching history, told me along a road skirting the sea one misty

The skilled men on the road are much rarer now, since railway traveling has become so cheap, and unionism has developed. A crists or a firike will, however, act in two ways—sending men out, and drawing them ways—sending men out, and drawing them in. A bundle of clothing or tools is gener-ally carried by the skilled tramp, and his

Is there any more enjoyable feeling in life than to be under a bright morning sky, comfortably equipped, on the tramp through a pleasant country: a world of meadows—a rocky dale—a stretch of brown, billowy meorland? The pulse beats freely, thoughts chase each other like summer batterflies, and you seem to ainex every pretty or wild bit of scenery, every quaint homestend, every living thing about you, with an enlarged and conquering individuality. Crowds oppress, cities tire, books weary; but on the tramp you are free to enjoy to receive, and to romance. The junior, tramp, however, is a limited individual, and he never gets fur away from society and civilization in our island home. The senior tramp, on the contrary, takes ship over sea, and has a wider range. He is everywhere at home. This elder brother is justly entitled a traveler; the junior has to be content with the less ambitious and sometimes shady designation of a tramp. Wandering and little-known tribes are not for him. He foots it at homey with good hope of reaching railways and hotels somewhere, if he turns his black upon them with fine scorn, and a philosophy warranted to endure for tweive or fourteen hours, but good enough wille it lasts; and renewable with morning light.

Alast there are others on the tramp, whose philosophy has little warrant at all, and, whose burdens are ever pressing, not gayly left behind! Apart from fine scenery, freedom, and rude health, it is in chance meetings with such specimens of the junior tramp, bright or dull-eyed, that his observing man will find much of the romance of his revolt against acres of bricks and mortar and the elbowing of crowds. The division just made is an induction from a pretty large experience.

The bright-eyed tramp is always a man with an object and a character. He has of the barnek-gates at Devonport when, behold, our two tramps coming along in custody. An acute rural policeman had, so we learned, noticed their military step and bearing and gone up to them, saying, with a bold guess?

"You are deserters from Devenport?" "You are deserters from Devouport?"
Taken shock, as such persons are if you can show you know anything about them, and possibly suspecting the man had a description of them, they admitted they were, and offered no resistance, discipline once more asserting its power. They belonged to a killed regiment; they had only been five daysefrom harracks; and finer follows five days from barracks; and finer fellow I never saw. They were navvies by occupation.

Foreigners on the tramp are not very mmon. except on the coast-roads, and Foreigners on the train are not very common, except on the coast-roads, and they are mostly sailors. They are not communicative, and know little English. The oddest specimen of a foreigner I remember was a German clock-mender I met in the Midlands, who puzzled me greatly. He walked like a drilled man; had well-kept side whighers and leagues the page of the property. Midlands, who puzzled me greatly. He walked like a drilled man; had well-kept side whiskers, and a bag over his shouldor. We passed and repassed several times. He cailled at road-side houses, and as I slack-ened pace, generally overlook me, but I failed to get him into fair conversation.

"Going far? To M.—? Long way yet." His peculiar German accent was coming out more strongly.

"Seeking work?"

"Yes, as he went along."

For several minutes we kept step in silence. Taking out a newspaper I began to read. The man's face relaxed.

"Any news of Garibaldi?" was the sudden question that startled me. A Guribaldian, I said to myself at once. It was just at the time the Haliain hero made his last armed venture. I read him the news, and he broke out warmly:

"Ah, bad man—bad; wicked man#...He became more of a puzzle than ever—a nut tar and the elbowing of crowds. The division just made is an induction from a pretty large experience.

The bright-eyed tramp is always a man with an object and a character. He has either a home before him or behind, to reach or to brighten. He will converse freely with you, tell you his history, and accept. little kindnesses in a manly spirit. The dull-eyed man does not like you to look him in the face too closely. Scenery seems to oppress him. He ambles along through the finest bits as if he were passing down a back slum. He is a waif, he has no home—only a native parish. He begs, whines, bullies, and I fear he also steals; so true is it that home has its subtle effect on the eye, the character, and the conception of Nature. Meeting such men on a lonely moor, we ask ourselves what, restrains them from robbing, and perhaps murdering? The answer comes clear.

"The other iden that sways their-minds, the Law-these are the only two ideas that rule them.

Walking across a lonely moor, the white road winding ribbon-like over distant brown hills, I was once thinking, in a dreamy way, over some scenes in Scotch history, wherein the sound of a pibroch history where the boots, started up, and sent my learn into my mouth. I was never sent and a heart was a clock-mender, good at Americans or any other make, and sent transped a district from a center, earned and a horizontess. "Thank you sir," was all he said, in a cold tone; but after he had gone a pace or two, and begun to cut, he turned round, saying, "Bloss you, sir, bless you!" as if some new or old chord of feeling had been revolved.

The better tramps are often amusing company, and over the worst compel you to moralize anew on the old theme of the mniverse and the individual. "Chats with a roadside stone-breaker—the true cona roadside stone-breaker—the true conqueror, because he always rises on the ruins he makes," as a witty prince said—are often pleasant. The turf-cutter, with his long spade pushed before him under the soil, is also an interesting object. Pleasant, too, it is to watch a dalesman thatching his hay with green rashes; to come across strange birds and animals; to note the old village wells and sun dials, the churches—and meeting-houses; to get glimpses of heavy antique furniture through cottage doorways; to be mistaken for a wool-buyer, an artist, "the new exciseman," as I was on one occasion; to epread news as I was on one occasion; to aprend news of big deeds; to find everywhere that Home is sacred, be it never so small or so lonely. He senreely lives, in fact, who always carries with him the bur den of society, who never tempts the un-known, except over sea, and who has never enjoyed the full and exquisite pleasure of 'on the tramp.'

Feed for Milch Cows in Winter. Feed for Milch Cows in Winter.

The first requisite for a large yield of milk in winter is a warm stable and plenty of dry bedding. It has been proved by repeated experiments that warming the water given cows to drink causes a perceptible increase in the quantity of milk. It is botter, if possible, to have a variety of fodder than to contine them to an exclusive diet, even of the best clover hay, which, when cut at the right season and properly cured, is undoubtedly as good a steady diet as can be found, excepting, erly cured, is undoubtedly as good a steady diet as can be found, excepting, perhaps, well-cured rowen. An occasional feed of bright, well-cured corn-fodder is also excellent for a change, and a ration of oat or barley straw ouce or twice a week will probably be relished and sharpen the appetite for hay. Oats, cut when in the milk and well cured, are highly relished, and produce a good yield of ished, and produce a good yield of milk. In addition to all the above she will eat clean, if an ordinary sized cow, give her daily, dividing into two feeds.

a peck of mangolds, four pounds of new-process oil-meal, four pounds of con-meal, and four pounds of bran. If the cow is a Holstein or an unusually large animal, the ration can be in-creased, but if she is a small Jersey, probably a less quantity will suffice. If mangolds cannot be obtained give probably a less quantity will suffice. If mangolds cannot be obtained give sugar beets, or even turnips, in case neither mangolds nor beets are convenient, only use care to slice them and feed directly after milking, so as to avoid an unpleasant flavor in the milk and butter, which is sure to occur when turnips are fed a short time before milking. Some feed, deportiently fore milking. Some feed decorticated cotton-seed cake meal instead of oilmeal, but others think the quantity of the butter made from it is not quite equal to that of corn meal alone. It requires good judgment and experience to properly feed and care for a lierd of cattle or horses so as to keep them in thrifty condition and avoid waste of fodder. One of the chief requisites

A Lawyer's Opinion.

One in the long roll of celebrities who have lived and died in the good old town of Winthrop was a country lawyer and a justice of the peace, known as Squire Howe, who flourished three-quarters of a century ago. Law-yers of his class in those days took their pay in work. So, when a man came to him one day and said, "Suuire, olution, and addressed the Senate on it, With the aid of all the learning in the world, Mr. Pugh said, the greatest statesmen in the world were still grappling with the money question at precisely the same point at which they began to grapple with it. So far as the United States were concerned, there had never been a time when our paper and metallic currency had been so sound and healthy as it was to-day. This condition of affairs, and the premium on our bonds constituted a grim satire on the prophecies of the opponents of the legislation hitherto enacted by Congress on the money question. Nothing more was to be desired, Mr. Pugh thought, than that the banks, bankers and Federal Trensury should stand aside and allow the Gresham law to have full and free operation on our silver currency. He had much confidence in the practical ideas, sound judgment, and integrity of President Cleveland and his devotion to constitutional principles. But many Democrats would differ with the President on the money question and our details affecting the tariff. These questions were so far-reaching and combileated in their overation as not to be fodder. One of the chief requisites for success in this direction is regularity in feeding and watering. Another is to learn just the amount each animal can digest and assimilate. It is better to keep them a little short, so that their appetites may be keen, than to over-feed them. No more should be given at once than will be immediately eaten up clean. When the hay is of good quality three fodderings a day probably answers as well as more, but when coarse, unpalatable fodder is given, better results can generally be obtained by feeding neat stock five Mr. Pugh said, the greatest statesmen in the obtained by feeding neat stock five times daily. It is much better to after-nate a feed of poorer quality with the good every day than to confine animals exclusively to a diet of poor hay for any length of time. Most farmers understand that it is not good economy to feed all their poorest fodder when stock first comes to the barn, as when this is done the change from green to

Mr. Pugh quoted figures from the New York Clearing House to show that only about 3½ per cent. of the clearing house transactions, were represented by cash, the remainder being made up principally by checks. Congress was confronted, he said, with an official announcement that our business relations had reached a crisis in which we must suspend the coinage of silver if, we ness relations had reached a crisis in which we must suspend the coinage of silver if we would secure an international ratio between gold and silver. The real point involved, Mr. Pugh believed, not the suspension, but the total stoppage of silver coinage, and if silver coinage were suspended now, it would be a blow that would directly and speedity tend to the consummation of an organized conspiracy of capitalists to secure absolute control of our currency and the regulation of the volume and consequent purchasing power. Mr. Pugh believed its spoke for the Southern people when he said that three-fourths of them would to-day, if opportunity were given, vote against vices were that it the carrier, our just as the time arrived for taking, the re-mains to the cemotery a severe thun-der-storm came up, and it was consid-cred best not to start until the worst. of the storm was ever. The wait was rather an embarrassing one, but the undertaker was equal to the emergency. Standing on the chancel steps he shouted so as to be heard in the choir loft at the other end of the building: "The organist will please give us a little music to white away the time." Even the mourners smiled. if opportunity were given, vote against the proposition to suspend silver coinage. The petitions that came to Congress favoring suspension were all on printed blanks, and signed mainly by bankers.

Mr. Pugh criticised the arguments of the Secretary of the Treasury and of the President. Ho inquired whether we were to take the mere diction of the President on this matter, and insisted that the executive offimatter, and insisted that the executive offi-cers were under obligation to enforce the laws of Congress. Why had those laws been hourly violated? Had Congress abdi-cated its powers to the Executive Depart-ment of the Government? The national banks which were fiscal agents of the Gov-ernment, should not, Mr. Pugh thought, have been allowed to become members of a clear-ing boyes, that discretified the sites certific use-that discredited the silver certifi ing house—that discredited the silver cortili-cates of the Government. The national banks had evaded the law of Congress by agreeing that they would not offer silver cer-tificates to the clearing houses, and, there-fore, none had been actually refused by the clearing house. A Now York newspaper, he said, had squarely identified the invasion.

[London dispatch.] Presidential Succession Presidential Succession.

Mr. Caldwell, of Tennessee, called up the Hoar Presidential succession bill in the House, and stated that the committee, in reporting this measure, had not dealt with indifference or discussed with other propositions before it. There Intelligence has been received here that Germany has seized the Islands of Samoa ma stated that the committee, in reporting this measure, had not dealt with indifference or discussed with other propositions before it. There, were many measures proposed that would more properly need all possible or imaginary exigencies than the one now reported, but they all required a constitutional amendment before they could become laws, and a constitutional amendment before they could become laws, and a constitutional amendment before they could become laws, and a constitutional amendment involved a delay which would ill accord with the reasonable anxiety were many exigencies which the present anxiety were many exigencies which the present exigency it completely covered. It was a temporary bridge thrown across as chasmi-in-order-to-meet public demand, and would be followed in due time by an enduring structure over which a long line of Republican-Democratic Presidents singlet march in unbroken succession, Mr. Cooper, of Ohio Republican-Democratic Presidents in the billing against the idea of estingible of the property of the Constitution, but of the spirit and letter of the Constitution, but of the spirit and letter of the Constitution, but of the spirit and letter of the Constitution, but of the spirit and interesting the way should be remedied by carefully considered legislation. The German Consul then hauled down the Samoan flag and rau up the German colors in its stead. The Samoans threaten to make war on the Germans. The American mal British Consuls protested against the action of the Germans. In February, 1895, the announcement-was made that Germany had annexe: these islands, and that its action was in pursuance of a secret agreement between the Governments of Germany and England. The officials at the Colonial Office in London said that they believed that the agitation of the Australians was only temporary, and that there was a growing feeling both in Australia and England that Germany would be a good neighber, and that if was wise to give Germany an interest in the Pacific Islands to offset the aggressions of France, Strangely enough the dispatch announcing the annexation said that Germany's proceedings were "despite the protests of the English and American Consuls." This seizure touches England more nearly than any other power, because the Samoans are distant only 400 miles from the British Fiji Islands, and contain two of the safest and best harbors in the Pacific. The islands are nine in number, have an area of about 1,400 square miles, and a population of nearly 50,000. The largest island is Upolararea, 335 square milest, population, 17,000. On this feland is Apia, the capital of the group, residence of the King and foreign consuls; and principal commercial town in the kingdom. The soil is rich and the surface densely wooded. The products comprise cocoanut-oil, arrowword, cotton, castor beans, ginger, coffee; tortoise shell, and vegetables. The commerce of the island is mostly controlled by a single Hamburg house, and the protection of that soil-tary German trading establishment furnishes to the Berlin island-grabber a pretext for the theft of a whole. -J. B. Corliss, attorney for Rev. Fr. Kolasinski, has prepared an appeal in the St. Albert's Church case, which is to be at once forwarded to Rome. It denies all charges made before Bishop Borgess against Fr. Kolusiuski, and charges that the Bisho violated the canon laws in deposing Kolasinski before giving him a hearing.

-A fine legal twist will give the Chicago awyers a "whack" at the Newberry estate. Julia Newberry, daughter of Walter, inherted $120,000, which she left to her mother on condition of her mother's bequeathing it some charitable institution for women. Mrs. Newberry preferred inheriting the noney as heir to her daughter instead of taking it under the will, and refrained from eaving it to any charitable institution. The Chicago Hospital for Women and Children ans begun suit for the possession of this money, on the ground that it is the kind of institution described.—Free Press.

-A. L. Williams, who has just died at Owosso, at the age of 78 years, was a son of Oliver Williams, who came to Detroit in 1805 as a lake fur trader. The senior Williams was captured by the British at Fort Mackinac in the war of 1812. At the close of that war he removed his family from Conord, Mass., to Detroit, and resided at the corner of Jefferson avenue and Bates street until 1819. He then removed to Silver Lake, Oakland County. He had a large family, all of whom were well-known pioneers of Michigan. The deceased, with his brother, B. O. Williams, founded Owosso in 1822. It has been their home ever since, although in the meantime A. L. Williams visited many parts of the world. Gardner Williams, mother brother, resided at East Saginaw, of Williams, another brother, now lives in Flint. A sister is the wife of the pioneer proprietor of the Hodges House, at Pontiac Free Press. .

-Don M. Dickinson, the Michigan Democratic politician, is the subject of a hat story, says the New York Tribune. He was in this city about a month ago with I. M. Westen, of Grand Rapids. They had a room together at the Hoffman When they separated Dickinson started for Washington and Weston remained here for a day and then went back to Michigan. Just before he went away Weston found in the room a hat-box and silk hat belonging to Dickinson. • Thinking that it had been left behind by mistake, he took it with him When he left home a week ago to come East with Mr. Dickinson he brought the hat with him. At Detroit he found that Dickinson had started without waiting for him. When he reached New York Dickinson had started for Washington. In the capital they were so busy getting appointments that he forgot all about the hat until they got back to the Hoffman House, in this city, Saturday last. He had faithfully carried it around all this time. When he came to mention the fact that he had the hat, Dickinson's face was a picture, which his reply explained: "That int," said he. "Why, I have been trying for months to throw that hat away. I left it here in the Hoffman House, thinking that would surely effect my purpose." Weston presented the last to the parter.

-Miss T. A. Strumbli, of Rollin, answered a personal advertisement for correspondence with a wealthy and handsome oung man of Hartsville, N. Y., named George Benjamin, and went thither to be narried to him. One glance at the fellow was enough, and she returned by the first

The Search for Wilkes Booth,

The assassination of Abraham Lincoln was a military crime. While actually in command of the national forces, he was killed in a city which was his headquarters, strongly fo tified and garrisoned, with a military goverand garrisoned, with a military gover-nor, and a provost marshal whose pa-trols were abroad night and day arrest-ing all persons found violating the "rules of war," Not only was the mur-dered commander-in-chief, to use the words of the Constitution, "in actual service in time of war," but it was a time of "public-danger," in which the assassins were constitutionally excluded from any right to a trial in the civil courts. Peace had not then been concourts. Peace had not then been con-quered; there was a powerful enemy in arms, to whom "aid and comfort" could be given; the leader of the rebellion was still at large; many loyal men were becoming disheartened by the conwere becoming disheartened by the conscriptions and by the prolonged expenditure of blood and treasure; and there are good reasons for believing that many enemies of the Union, having traversed all the stages of crime, confidently hoped by this assassination to inaugurate anarchy at the North, and thus to prepare the way for a dictator.

tator. Before the martyr-President had ceased to live, Secretary Stanton di-rected a search for the recognized as-sassin, and an investigation into the circumstances connected with the perpetration of the bloody deed. The next tration of the D.oddy deed, The next day, in a letter to the Hon. Charles Francis Adams, Mr. Stanton said: "The murderer of the President has been discovered and evidence obtained that these horrible crimes tained that these horrible crimes were committed in execution of a conspiracy deliberately planned and set on foot by rebels, under pretense of avenging the South and aiding the rebel cause." Subsequently the Secretary of War announced, in an official bulletin, that all persons who had harbored or secreted Booth, Atzerodt, or Herold, or who had aided or assisted their escape, should be "subject to trial before a military commission, and the punishment is death." The bulletin concluded by saying: "Let the stain of innocent blood be removed from the land by the arrest and punfrom the land by the arrest and pun-ishment of the murderers! All good citizens are exhorted to aid public jus-tice on this occasion. Every man should consider his own innocence charged with this solemn duty, and rest neither night nor day till it is ac-complished."

complished."

Secretary Stanton faithfully performed his share of this work, and he was ably seconded by the Provost Marshal of the War Department, Col. L. C. Baker. The discovery by Fouche of the celebrated French conspiracy, headed by Pichegru, for the assassination of the first Emperor Napoleon, has been regarded as the greatest trition of the first Emperor Napoleon, has been regarded as the greatest triumph of detective-police skill on record; but it is selipsed by Col. Baker's report of his operations. It was not long after the commission of the great crime before he was thoroughly conversant with the associations and habits of the chief actor's acquaintances. The Physiology of a Blush.

The circulatory, respiratory, and di-gestive systems of the human body, though their functions are involuntary, are still to a great degree affected by the action of the nervous system. Now, the nervous system is susceptible to two kinds of stimuli—physical and mental. Physical stimuli include external excitants of various nature light, heat, sound, odor, and also chemical and galyanic irritants. Mental stimuli are the result of exercise of the will and thought, and also of powerful and sudden emotions, the various emotions acting through the nerves, affecting the circulatory system differently. Joyful emotions accelerate the action of the heart and cause the dilation of the the heart and cause the quation of the arterioles and capillaries to receive the added currents. Sudden terror or fear, on the contraction of the heart, and a simultaneous contraction of the small arteries, so that the face becomes blanched and the hands icy cold. The capillaries, or the small blood vessels which con-nect the arteries and veins are affected by anything which affects the circula tory system through the nerves. These small vesse's form a network over the entire body so close that the point of the finest needle can not be inserted between them. Thus, in blushing, a mental emotion has accelerated the cirmental emotion has accelerated the ciroulation and dilated the capillaries on the surface. The blood then rushes into them in such quantities that they become visible, not as a network, they lie too close together for that, but as a uniform flush upon the skin. The reason why some persons seldom or never blush is because through constitutional blush is because through constitutional or acquired power their nervous systems are more or less independent of emotional stimulus. Shame, joy, fear, or horror excite in them but little emotion, and, besides, such degree of emotion as may be excited is so far under the power of the will that it is permitted to send out no electric currents to disturb the even movements, of the circumstance. disturb the even movements of the cir

The Calumet and Heela mine in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan is probably the richest and most prolific copper mine in the world. Discovered in 1865, "it has built up an industry in which over 2,000 men and two flourishing towns of 5,000 inhabitants find employment at all seasons. The dividend ployment at all seasons. The dividend account exceeds $20,000,000. It pays quarterly dividends of $5 a share on 100,000 shares. More than one-third of the entire copper product of Northern Michigan has been taken from this mine, and a good share of the whole product of the globe. The total product of refined copper produced in 1882, was 28,000 tons. The Burra-Burra mine of South Africa, worked for twenty one years, did not yield account of the polyment. yment at all seasons. The dividend for twenty one years, did not yield as much copper as was raised from the depths of the Calumet mine in the two years of 1880 and 1881. It should be borne in mind that only virgin copper comes from the Lake Superior mines, and not copper cros, which mines in other regions yield, which cros have to be "treated" and refined to produce ears of 1880 and 1881. It should be copper.

Fight with a Grizzly.

Fight with a Grizzly.

While two telegraph repairers were carrying on their work in the Selkirk Mountains, one of them was attacked by a grizzy bear, which caught him by the calf of the leg as he was drinking, from a stream. The bear endeavored to carry him into the cave, but he placed his arms around a tree and bellowed for his companion, who came elose to the bear and emptied seven Winchester balls into him. Seeing the seven balls did not make him relinquish his hold, he caugh the ferocious anihis hold, he caught the ferocious his hold, he caught the ferocious animal by the ears and tried' to haul him off. This caused the animal to move a little, thus enabling the friend to pull his companion's rife from under the bear. He then commenced pouring his friend's seven bullets into the bear's head, and had fired the last shot when the bear rolled over. The trouble then the bear rolled over.
